From Tina VanderWal

We had an early Father's Day and a belated birthday for my husband Chuck last Sunday. All of our kids and their families in this area joined us. Watching my husband blow out the candles on his cake, I thought about all the fathers out there and how special they are. Good fathers give their children a strong and sturdy foundation to build their lives upon. They are the providers for their families. In the olden days, men were the only ones providing income for their families as the wives stayed home to provide care for their children. Now that part for most families has become a shared duty between husbands and wives.

The dads also provide the security in the families. My husband to this day still makes sure that all the doors are locked before we retire to bed. A reminder of that security came up this weekend. As our grandkids walked into our rec room, we heard some screams. "Grandma, Grandpa there's a huge spider on the ceiling!" We have vaulted ceilings in there, so it was close to 20 feet up. They were absolutely correct, though, it was huge, probably a wolf spider. I don't know about you, but spiders freak me out. Luckily, Chuck takes care of them for me. It was a pretty amusing scene listening to them strategize how to remove this spider without it falling on someone. A vacuum cleaner and a tall ladder did the trick. Problem solved and now our grandchildren felt safe to play in that room.

Good fathers are also there for you, to watch all your special activities and to be there to catch you if you fall. For me, my stepfather, Robert Hacker was my "good" father. My biological father was pretty much absent for most of my life. Whereas, Dad (Robert) came to every activity I was in, including a father daughter dance. He also picked me up when I fell, literally. When I came crying home after knocking out four teeth from a fall off my bicycle, Mom had to restrain Dad, because he had just taken a shower and was about to run outside to me in his underwear. He was a good father, and I was so blessed to have him.

Watching my husband with our children, I know that he is a good, no, a great father, and a wonderful grand-father, and I feel so blessed that I and all our children have him in our lives. And let's not forget the "Best" Father of all, our heavenly Father, God. Who provides for us daily all our needs. Who protects and guides us throughout our lives. And who is always there for us, ready to pick us up when we fall.

Lord, please bless all the Fathers in our congregation as we celebrate Father's Day and thank you for being the awesome Father you are and a wonderful model for all fathers to emulate. Happy Father's Day!

<sup>16</sup>May our Lord Jesus Christ himself and God our Father, who loved us and by his grace gave us eternal encouragement and good hope, <sup>17</sup>encourage your hearts and strengthen you in every good deed and word." 2 Thessalonians 2:16-17.
